

President Kim Il Sung's Political Creed

Pyongyang, July 6 (KCNA) -- "Go among the people!", this was the noble political creed of President Kim Il Sung who regarded it as his lifelong motto to believe in the people as in Heaven.

After embarking on the road of revolution in his early years, the President had always found himself among the people and led the revolution and construction to victory in reliance on them.

He kept it as an iron rule to fully reflect the people's demand, interests and desire in every line and policy whenever they were adopted.

It can be clearly proven by the fact that a new history of tending plants per cluster was made in the country.

In May Juche 63 (1974), the President visited a cooperative farm in South Hwanghae Province and expressed his satisfaction over the fact that the farm raised the yield of corn by increasing the number of its plants per phyong (about 3.3 m<sup>2</sup>). He visited the farm again which had a bumper crop in autumn that year and acquainted himself with the number of corn plants per phyong and counted the number of plants per hectare. Then, he confirmed that the increased number of plants per hectare made it possible to have good results in corn farming.

At the national agricultural conference held early in January next year, he called for conducting a drive to plant more corn throughout the country.

Like this, the President had always found himself among the people and guided socialist construction to victory by penetrating deep into the desire of the people and the specific conditions of the country. -0-

President Kim Il Sung Praised as Father of People

Pyongyang, July 6 (KCNA) -- In his lifetime President Kim Il Sung regarded himself as the son of the people and as their servant. So, the people in the DPRK have called him their father.

With warm love, he had always visited factories, farms and military units and taken care of the people's livelihood with paternal affection.

On January 9, Juche 51 (1962), he called at a bean curd factory in Pyongyang City, the then Pyongyang Knitwear Factory and the then Pyongyang Silk Mill in succession to settle the people's food and clothing problems and give important instructions for the improvement of the people's standard of living.

At a consultative meeting of senior party, state and economic officials in November 1991, he placed the vegetable production in Pyongyang City on the meeting agenda and took a bold measure for bringing about a decisive turn in vegetable farming.

One day in August 1993, he gave field guidance to five farms in South Hwanghae Province without having a moment's rest from early dawn to midday to give precious instructions on farming.

At a consultative meeting of senior officials in the economic sector held in the last days of his great life, he heard from an official a report on the completion of supply of new clothes to kindergarteners and schoolchildren across the country. He was so happy that he repeatedly expressed thanks to the official.

As seen above, the President had always found his pleasure in providing the people with a happy life.

The people of the DPRK will glorify the cause of the President, holding him in high esteem as their father forever. -0-
